Premiere Of Warner Bros. Pictures' "Entourage" - Arrivals

Mike Tyson lives in a Mediterranean-style mansion in the Seven Hills gated golf-course community in the Henderson suburbs of Las Vegas, Nevada. The legendary boxer paid a sum of $2.5 million for the house when he purchased it in 2016.

with his wife Lakina Spicer, opens in a double-height foyer with marble flooring. A wrought iron staircase leads to the second floor, where there are six bedrooms and six-and-a-half bathrooms, the half being a step-in tub in the master suite. The suite also features a fireplace and a private balcony.

The advertisement features a vibrant red background. At the top right, there is a white button with the text "Try Free". In the center, the word "SMALL" is enclosed in a blue-outlined box with a white minus sign below it. Below this box, the text "lead to" is written in a small, white font. To the right of "SMALL", the word "Wins" is written in a large, white, cursive font. Below "Wins", the words "BIG THINGS" are displayed in large, bold, white capital letters. The letters "B", "I", and "G" are each contained within a purple square with a white border. A white arrow points from the "BIG THINGS" area back up towards the "SMALL" box. At the bottom right of the ad, there is a white button with the text "Skip Ad" and a right-pointing arrow. A small circular icon is visible in the bottom right corner of the ad area.

Common areas of the house include a spacious living room, a center-island kitchen with wet bar and wine closet, a family room with a wine cellar, an office, a dining hall with window walls, and a great room with a bar.

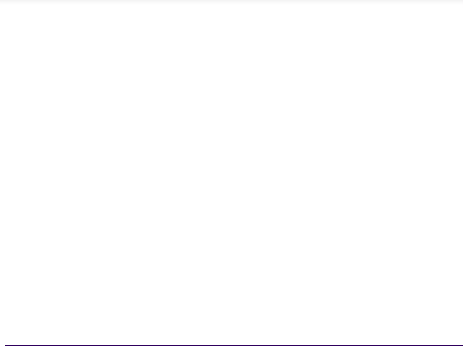

Outdoors, there is an extended swimming pool resembling a lagoon, a spa, a barbecue setting, fountain area with fireplace, and lush gardens all around.

The deal of the house was brokered by Kenneth Lowman of Luxury Homes of Las Vegas. He represented both sides of the deal. Lowman told Las Vegas Review Journal after the deal was done that Mike Tyson was delighted about the new house.

"They recognized it was a good opportunity and smartly jumped on it. Mike Tyson was very happy with the purchase."

Mike Tyson and his residences over the years

Mike Tyson has changed residences several times, especially when his boxing career was at peak. He started at a modest Brooklyn apartment and ended up in a five-bedroom mansion in Ohio which had Jacuzzi, basketball courts, and tiger cages for his pet.

After this, Mike Tyson lived in a massive 21-bedroom mansion in Connecticut, which he was forced to sell once again after going bankrupt in 2003. Rapper 50 Cent purchased the house for $4.5 million.

Post a brief stay at a Maryland residence from 1995 to 2000, Mike Tyson moved to Seven Hills, Las Vegas, but in a different property than the one he lives in now. That house was famously used by Hollywood movie director Todd Phillips for his Hangover movies starring Bradley Cooper.
